

Capital & Command Submission Guidelines

1. A name and an email are required in order for your submission to be considered. It should go without saying that any submissions to Capital & Command are entirely anonymous until published, which brings us to our next point...
2. Make sure to specify whether or not you want your name or an alias attached to your post if we decide to publish it.
3. There isn't necessarily a word limit, although pieces above 500-750 words are more likely to be published. There is no maximum word count.
4. Guest submissions are likely to undergo one or several rounds of edits before they're published. This editing process will of course be collaborative.
5. All guest-posts will be labeled as such. But if you contribute regularly, especially on a particular topic, we would love to give you your own column!
